The Argentine government has recently been tightening its control over the travel abroad of foreigners residing in Argentina who are either Communists or opponents of the Peron government. Prior to the issuance by the Federal Police of a good-conduct certificate, which is a prerequisite for leaving and re-entering Argentina, the applicant's name is checked in the files of the Seccion Orden Social, Seccion Orden Politico, and Seccion Especial of the Federal Police. If there is any information which indicates that the applicant is a member of the opposition or a Communist, the certificate is not issued.
